Problem Statement

Overview of Key Challenges in the Furniture Market

Limited Customization Options

Most furniture stores offer generic designs that do not cater to individual preferences. This lack of customization restricts consumers from tailoring their purchases to fit their unique style and needs.

Lock of Eco-Friendly Choices

As sustainability becomes a priority for consumers, the limited availability of eco-friendly furniture options presents a significant challenge. Many consumers want to make environmentally conscious choices but find themselves with few viable options.

Durability Concerns

Many mass-produced furniture pieces are made with cost-cutting materials, leading to concerns about their quality and longevity. Consumers often find themselves needing replacements sooner than expected, which is both inconvenient and costly.

Inconvenient Shopping Experience

The process of visiting multiple stores to find the right furniture can be time-consuming and frustrating. Additionally, online shopping often lacks transparency regarding quality and pricing, leaving consumers uncertain about their purchases.
